Additional analysis for Experiment 1: Effect of lag between successive targets

The analysis included data from Experiment 1 (Thematic-matching), at the faster speed of presentation (1.1s), and examined accuracy as a function of the number of distractors since the last target. Results revealed poorer performance towards the end of each category across all lags (see Figure 1). ANOVA on the data revealed a significant main effect of 'within-category' decline: $F(1,4)=$ 17.20, $p=.014$, there was no main effect of 'lag' $p>.1$ ), and a trend-level interaction between 'lag' and 'within-category' decline: $F(1,4)=14.72, p=.064$.

Footnote: Data expressed as percentages of target-present and target-absent trials. Data were divided into the first and second half of each category, allowing within-category fatigue to be assessed. They were also divided into the first and second half of each experimental session, allowing between-category fatigue to be assessed. These data are broken down into the two presentation speeds and strong/weak targets. The distractors are shared and equally distributed 'within' each category; resulting in an equal number of false alarms and correct rejections for the strong/weak targets. RT reported in milliseconds (standard deviations)
