

This is a repository copy of Remembering the scholarship of Nathan Sears: a forum in memoriam.

White Rose Research Online URL for this paper: https://eprints.whiterose.ac.uk/203824/

Version: Published Version

Article:

Lecavalier, E. and Stiles, G. orcid.org/0000-0003-1814-3061 (2023) Remembering the scholarship of Nathan Sears: a forum in memoriam. Global Policy, 14 (4). pp. 623-624. ISSN 1758-5880

https://doi.org/10.1111/1758-5899.13285

Reuse

This article is distributed under the terms of the Creative Commons Attribution-NonCommercial-NoDerivs (CC BY-NC-ND) licence. This licence only allows you to download this work and share it with others as long as you credit the authors, but you can't change the article in any way or use it commercially. More information and the full terms of the licence here: https://creativecommons.org/licenses/

Takedown

If you consider content in White Rose Research Online to be in breach of UK law, please notify us by emailing eprints@whiterose.ac.uk including the URL of the record and the reason for the withdrawal request.

SPECIAL SECTION

Check for updates

Remembering the scholarship of Nathan Sears: A forum in memoriam

Emma Lecavalier 1 | Gregory Stiles 2

<sup>1</sup>University of Toronto, Toronto, Ontario, Canada

Correspondence

Emma Lecavalier, University of Toronto, Toronto, ON, Canada.

Email: e.lecavalier@mail.utoronto.ca

The team at Global Policy: Next Generation were heart-broken to hear of the tragic and untimely passing of Dr. Nathan Alexander Sears earlier this year. GPNG is an initiative focused on amplifying the scholarship of early career researchers—exceptional thinkers at the beginning of their professional academic careers. As editors and as colleagues, we were not prepared to be writing in memoriam about one of our earliest contributors.

Dr. Sears contributed an exceptional article to the first edition of Global Policy: Next Generation (2020). It remains GPNG's most highly cited and engaged-with publication. In the video abstract of the article found here, Dr. Sears discusses the paper's argument and contribution to the field.

Among the many tragedies of Dr. Sears' passing is that his scholarly career was cut short just as it was beginning. He had defended his PhD dissertation at the University of Toronto in October 2022. The recency of this milestone achievement, however, belies a career already full of accomplishments, including work as a Government of Canada Cadieux-Léger policy fellow and several influential articles (Sears, 2017, 2020, 2021; Smith et al., 2020). Dr. Sears' work was at the cutting edge of research on global existential risk, using the tools of International Relations theory to understand why great powers choose to cooperate—or not—on human-induced civilisational threats from nuclear war to bioengineered pathogens to 'unaligned' artificial intelligence.

Dr. Sears' death is a profound loss for both the research and policy communities with which he so passionately engaged. His passing also leaves a hole in our academic community that is wider than just his research. Nathan was an engaging and passionate scholar who positively contributed to every community he was a part of. He was a thoughtful and respectful listener and a generous and enthusiastic peer. Despite the seriousness of his work and his intense concern with existential risk, Nathan was also known as someone with a great sense of humour—quick to laugh and armed with a bright and infectious smile.

This forum is a tribute to Dr. Sears' life through a reflection on his scholarship and research career. The five contributions consider the impact of Dr. Sears' published and unpublished research and the ideas he developed over the course of his too-brief career. The contributors pay their respects to Dr. Sears in the best way scholars know how—by engaging with, debating with, critiquing and expanding on his ideas. They also speculate about where Nathan's work may have gone in the future and the contributions to humanity he may have made. Those who knew Dr. Sears know that he relished intellectual debate: he would have truly enjoyed reading these reflections.

Our hearts go out to Nathan's family and all those in our community who are mourning him and the loss of such enormous potential. We hope this forum can amplify Dr. Sears' work so that his scholarship and intellectual contributions can live on.

DATA AVAILABILITY STATEMENT

Data sharing not applicable to this article as no datasets were generated or analysed during the current study.

This is an open access article under the terms of the Creative Commons Attribution-NonCommercial-NoDerivs License, which permits use and distribution in any medium, provided the original work is properly cited, the use is non-commercial and no modifications or adaptations are made.

© 2023 The Authors. Global Policy published by Durham University and John Wiley & Sons Ltd.

&lt;sup>2</sup>University of Sheffield, Sheffield, UK

LECAVALIER and STILES

REFERENCES

- Sears, N.A. (2017) The neoclassical realist research program: between progressive promise and degenerative dangers. International Politics Reviews, 5, 21–31. Available from: https://doi.org/10.1057/s41312-017-0020-x
- Sears, N.A. (2020) Existential security: towards a security framework for the survival of humanity. Global Policy, 11(2), 255–266. Available from: https://doi.org/10.1111/1758-5899.12800
- Sears, N.A. (2021) International politics in the age of existential threats. Journal of Global Security Studies, 6(3), ogaa027. Available from: https://doi.org/10.1093/jogss/ogaa027
- Smith, J., Sears, N., Taylor, B. & Johnson, M. (2020) Serious games for serious crises: reflections from an infectious disease outbreak matrix game. Globalization and Health, 16(1), 255–266. Available from: https://doi.org/10.1111/175 8-5899.12800

AUTHOR BIOGRAPHIES

Emma Lecavalier, University of Toronto, Board Member and former Deputy Editor, Global Policy: Next Generation.

Gregory Stiles, University of Sheffield, Editor, Global Policy: Next Generation.

How to cite this article: Lecavalier, E. & Stiles, G. (2023) Remembering the scholarship of Nathan Sears: A forum in memoriam. Global Policy, 14, 623–624. Available from: https://doi.org/10.1111/1758-5899.13285