

This is a repository copy of Characteristics and community evolution patterns of the international scrap metal trade.

White Rose Research Online URL for this paper:
<https://eprints.whiterose.ac.uk/151932/>

Version: Supplemental Material

Article:

Hu, X., Wang, C., Lim, M.K. et al. (1 more author) (2020) Characteristics and community evolution patterns of the international scrap metal trade. Journal of Cleaner Production, 243. 118576. ISSN 0959-6526

<https://doi.org/10.1016/j.jclepro.2019.118576>

Article available under the terms of the CC-BY-NC-ND licence
(<https://creativecommons.org/licenses/by-nc-nd/4.0/>).

Reuse

This article is distributed under the terms of the Creative Commons Attribution-NonCommercial-NoDerivs (CC BY-NC-ND) licence. This licence only allows you to download this work and share it with others as long as you credit the authors, but you can't change the article in any way or use it commercially. More information and the full terms of the licence here: <https://creativecommons.org/licenses/>

Takedown

If you consider content in White Rose Research Online to be in breach of UK law, please notify us by emailing eprints@whiterose.ac.uk including the URL of the record and the reason for the withdrawal request.

eprints@whiterose.ac.uk
<https://eprints.whiterose.ac.uk/>

Highlights:

- The international scrap metal trade is analyzed using complex network theory.
- The scale-free characteristic of trade networks and the increasing monopolization of the export market are revealed.
- Core countries leading the hierarchical trade relationships are revealed.
- The trade communities and the dynamic evolution patterns are explored.
- The effects of geopolitics and economic turbulence are evidenced in the formation of the communities.